

Keeping up to date with research: NUBS

There are a number of easy ways to keep up to date with research. Rather than visit each of the major journals in your subject area, you can get the latest research to come to you.

Generally, the advice is to pick up eresource links from LibrarySearch <http://librarysearch.napier.ac.uk> Today, however, you will be asked to use the links provided or to Google. This is because there are some computing lab login issues.

Today, you can choose to set up one or more of the following:

- Journal new issue alerts – you will receive the table of contents
- Search alerts – these are set up across multiple journals on a particular database/publisher site.
- RSS feeds – these deliver tables of contents or new search results to your desktop (or a web-based feed reader).
- Tables of contents services – you can sign up in one location to get tables of contents from multiple journals.
- LibrarySearch – you can set up search alerts or RSS feeds to receive links to new records retrieved by your saved search.

New journal issue alerts

To set up a journal alert, you first need to create a personal account. Often you will need to validate a link sent to your email account before you can set up your alert. You can organise your email alerts by creating folders <https://support.office.com/en-us/article/Manage-email-messages-by-using-rules-c24f5dea-9465-4df4-ad17-a50704d66c59>

The page displays the journal title, volume information (Volume 19, Issue 1, 2016), and a sidebar with navigation options. A red box highlights the 'New content RSS feed' option in the sidebar.

2. Click on Alert me > New content email alert.
3. On the subscribe for email alert page, you can either
 - a. Log in if you've previously registered or
 - b. Register for an account so that you can amend the alert.

The Impact of Demographic Variables on Perception of Importance and Continued Usage of Facebook in the US

15 February 2016, 07:30:39 | Jha, S., Ye, C. >

Many firms have started investing in social media, hoping to reach and to engage their customers. However, results from social media initiatives have been inconsistent, underscoring the need to understand social media use at the individual level. We examined the impact of demographics on the attitudes of Facebook users towards the

Table of Contents services

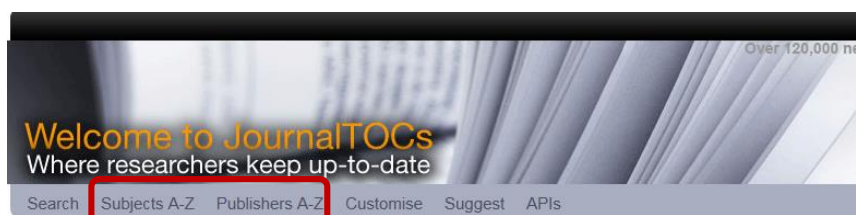

JournalTOCs is the largest, free collection of scholarly journal Tables of Contents (TOCs). It alerts you when new issues of your followed journals are published. You can also set up search alerts.

1. Go to <http://www.journaltoCs.ac.uk/>
2. Click Sign In, then on the next page Sign Up. A validation link will be sent to your email account. Then again Sign In.

The screenshot shows the JournalTOCs website interface. At the top, there is a navigation bar with links for Search, Subjects A-Z, Publishers A-Z, Customise, Suggest, APIs, About, Help, and News. A 'Sign In' button is highlighted with a red box. Below the navigation bar is a 'Sign In' form with fields for 'Email Address' and 'Password', and a 'Sign In' button. A link for 'Forgotten your Password?' is also visible. At the bottom of the form, there is a link for 'Sign Up' highlighted with a red box.

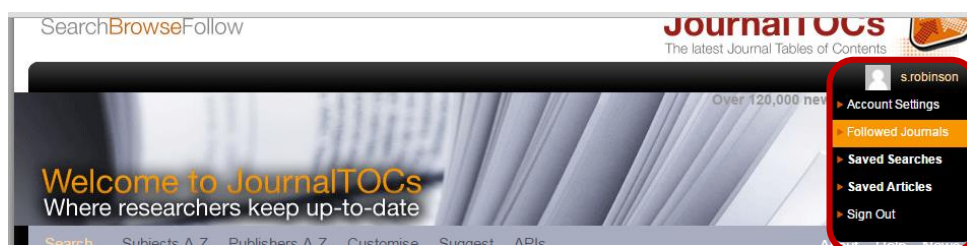

3. Choose journal(s) by publisher or by subject.

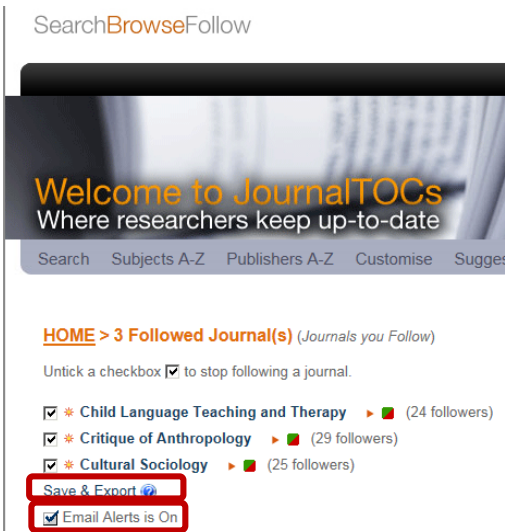

4. Select titles

5. Click on Followed Journals.

6. To receive up to 30 TOC alerts by email, tick the Email Alerts box.

7. To set up RSS feeds, click Save & Export. Select Save as and name the file, e.g. Sage.

8. Select Import and Export from the Add to favourites dropdown list.

9. Select the following options in turn from the dialogue box: Import from file > Feeds > browse to where you've saved the file > Select and open > Select a destination folder for the feeds > Import. See also <http://www.journaltocs.ac.uk/whatisOPML.html>

10. Your new feeds will now display in your RSS reader.

Search alerts

1. Sign in or set up account as above.

2. Perform search.

3. Go to Saved Searches.

This screenshot shows the user account menu on the JournalTOCs website. The menu is open, showing options: "Account Settings", "Followed Journals", "Saved Searches" (highlighted in orange), "Saved Articles", and "Sign Out". The user's name "s.robison" is visible at the top of the menu. The background shows the same search interface as the previous screenshot, with the search box containing "mitochondrial disorder".

4. Save your search.

The screenshot shows the "Saved Searches" page. The breadcrumb "HOME > Saved Searches (Maximum 100 searches)" is visible. A message states "You haven't saved any search yet." Below this, a box titled "You have recently searched for:" contains a list item: "- mitochondrial disorder (found 137 articles) [Delete] [Save]".

5. Create alert or RSS feed.
